INTRODUCTION

---

Use this guide as a project journal. Inside you will find questions to think through as you complete each phase of your project. Use the space provided to write down your answers, reflections, and any new questions you find yourself asking.

As you work through this guide, remember the Deciding Forward Model. Be curious as you explore your interests and figure out what kind of project you would like to pursue. Dig deep as you set out to discover the steps you would need to take to turn your project idea into reality. Be intentional as you reflect on your progress, experiences, and the lessons you have learned about yourself and your project as you decide whether to keep your original goal or pivot to a new goal. Remember: the ability to persevere through challenges and setbacks and the ability to change directions and pivot towards a new goal when the time is right are both valuable life skills you will apply throughout your life. The key is being able to honestly and intentionally reflect on your experiences and the lessons you have learned to determine the direction you should move in next.

Let's get started!
